INTERESTING SOUVENIRS. The Norfolk Argus, in recording the recent death there of Mrs. Elizabeth Ewell,

She had reached her seventy-fourth year, and, retaining fresh to the last the recollections of the brilliant and remarkable society in which she spent her earlier years, she was in her old age, unconsciously to herself, one of the most interesting and eloquent chroniclers to whom it was ever our good fortune to listen. She was the daughter of Benjamin Stoddert, esq., of Maryland, who became the first Secretary of the Navy, when that branch of the public service was separated from the Department of War during the administration of the elder Adams, and she was conpectable families of her native State.—

With some of the prominent statesmen of the Washington and All these pieces are within the range of ordinary players and singers and are invariably characterized by delicious melody and easy accompaniments. the Washington and Adams dynasties she was in early life in the habit of daily interof men who have been laid for more than half a century in their graves, and whose names make up no unimportant part of the history of a great epoch.

She was present when the death of Washington was announced to Congress and saw Gen. Harry Lee, of the Legion, when he offered that famous resolution in honor of Washington, ending in the words, now known over the earth, "first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen." had known Gen. Lee from having often seen him in her father's house, and was present when he delivered before Congress his celebrated oration on the character of Washington. She marked his extreme embarrassment in the beginning of his speech, which had well nigh overcome him, his subsequent self-possession, and his ultimate success .-She saw John Marshall, as Chief Justice of the United States, administer the oath of office to Thomas Jefferson in 1801, and heard Jefferson deliver that memorable inaugural, the phrases and spirit of which may still be detected in every similar paper down to the

THE RESIDENCE OF GEN. CASS. The Washington correspondent of a New York paper thus describes the internal splendor of the mansion of the distinguished head of the State Department in that city: "The illustrious Secretary lives in a brown stone-house, not far from the White House, which is about sixty feet front and about 70 feet in depth. Gen Cass is reported to be worth five millions dollars. His house is beautifully furnished, the settees and chairs being covered with blue and white damasked silk. The marble medallions, statuary, paintings and other features of art which decorate the walls and various niches in his house, are said to be valued at four hundred thousand dollars. Among these gems of art are the fol-lowing:—Marble Medallions of St. Peter and St. Paul, which belonged to the Church of St. Peter, in Motorio, which was built by Constantine over the spot where St. Peter was crucified. They were bought by Maj. Cass while on a visit to Gen. Oudinet, the French commander. Original medallions of white marble, in superb frames, highly enamelled, of Innocent XI, and Leo X., obtained by Gen. first class Music Store. Call and examine before Cass from the Monastery of Camaldolis .- purchasing elsewhere. Twelve medallions, in superb frames, representing the Saviour, Virgin, and some of the Apostles. They belonged to the church of St. Paul, which was the first Christian church built in Rome. They are master-pieces. A crucifix, which belonged to Cardinal Attonelli, the papal Secretary of State-very rich.

Paintings "St. Agnes with her Lamb," an original, by Guido Romano; "St. Appolwho suffered marytyrdom by the extraction of her teeth-obtained from the gallery of Cardinal Oriole. "The Holy family, an original, by Vahnucia; "Return of Columbus from his First Voyage; "The Annunciation;" "The Madonna," an original, by Carlo Polce, bought by General Cass at Bologna, from the Sampieri palace; "St. Rosa." original, by Carlo Marratti: besides over two hundred others of like value and historic interest, who called upon him to wish him 'A happy New Year.'

An editor of the Utien Herald writes from Heidelburg Germany, thus:-He who comes to Europe with the belief that all the world is agape with wonder at the greatness of the American republic, who hugs the sweet unction to his soul that the masses of the old world have nothing to do but sing hosannas to the American eagle; who thinks that whenever an American citizen makes his appearance all Europedom must needs take off its GREGORY, under whose joint management no hat will wake up to find himself the victim of a cruel delusion. The fact is, we are not half so much thought of by these wily barbarians as we imagine. Our country, of which we are so ostentatiously proud, is not which see are so estentationally proud, is not rated at such tremendous pumpkins by the of COOK and PARLOR STOVES that has ever world at large, as our vanity leads us to world at large, as our vanity leads us to been offered in this city. Among my Cooks are the think. In the far East, more especially, our Diamond Rook, Nevada, Comet, Wisconsin, Charthink. In the far East, more especially, our fame is as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals. We are regarded as in some way a sort of appendix to England—as a sort of political fungus clinging to the skirts of the British isles. Beyond that they know little expect that we come to the East to get except that we come to the East to get Six and Nine Plate Stoves. Washington STOVE eivilized; have money and spend it like fools. POLISH, STOVE PIPE, SHEET ZINC, &c. In Europe we are better known if not more cordially despised. With a few exceptions, we are rather supposed to live in New York city, which is a city bordering on the Rocky Mountains, to own niggers adlibitum and to settle all our disputes with the bowie-knife and revolver.
